TIDBITS AND TRIVIA

In 1955, Sears Roebuck & Co, ran an advertisement with a phone number for children to call and talk to Santa. Instead of calling the North Pole, the phone number was misprinted and the calls went to the desk of the Continental Air Defense Command's director of operations, Col. Harry Shoup. When the phone rang, Col. Shoup was surprised when a small voice on the other line asked for Santa. Shoup played along and continued the conversation with the little girl as if he really was Santa.

When the calls continued to come in, Shoup began staffing the line with airmen to answer for Mr. Claus.

On Christmas Eve, the airmen added Santa's sleigh to the glass board the command center used to track flights over the United States.

Soon after, Col. Shoup called the radio station and said, "This is the commander at the Combat Alert Center, and we have an unidentified flying object. Why, it looks like a sleigh." And so, the tradition was born.

The North American Aerospace Defense Command (NORAD) took over the responsibility for tracking Santa in 1958.

To this day, NORAD staff members, as well as family and friends, volunteer their time to help respond to the children's calls, letters and emails. They also track Santa's flight each Christmas. Check it out with your grandkids at noradsanta.org starting on December 1st.

President Lincoln, President Jefferson, and President Washington. On day two, we'll board the Potomac Scenic Eagle Railroad for a three-hour experience aboard the vintage diesel train. The next train we'll board will be the New Tygart Flyer train for a 46-mile round trip journey through the West Virginia wilderness. After that, it's the West Virginia Railroad Museum. We'll spend one night at the famous Greenbrier Resort. We'll get an insiders look at the now declassified, secret bunker, built underneath the Greenbrier in 1958. Monticello, Williamsburg, Jamestown, and Yorktown are also on the agenda. "Almost heaven, West Virginia, Blue Ridge Mountains, Shenandoah River...." John Denver knew what he was singing about.
